Dear Students,

It is an exciting time to grow up in Virginia. You have more information and more opportunities at your fingertips than your parents and grandparents ever could have imagined. Unfortunately, there are also people out there trying to put you on the wrong path by getting you involved in drugs, gangs, or other crimes. The choices you make right now will either open doors or limit your opportunities. Luckily, you do not have to make these decisions alone.

As a father of three daughters, and as someone who has worked in the field of law for many years, I understand that Virginia has a responsibility to help you reach your full potential. That is why I'm excited to share this course and workbook with you. "Reducing Gangs in Virginia: Your Friends, Your Choice" will give you the tools you need to say no to gangs, drugs, and other things that will hold you back.

Throughout this course you are going to learn how to identify gangs and other illegal activities, ways to say no to gangs, and skills for making decisions that will help you succeed in school and in life. Remember, you have a lot of adults in your life that want to help you. Don't be afraid to ask a teacher, police officer, mentor, or another trusted adult if you ever need help making a decision or getting out of a tough situation, and use the skills you learn in this course to steer clear of gangs and drugs.

Sincerely,

Jason Miyares Attorney General

Your Friends, Your Choices: Choosing Friends

Justin Jumps In

For Justin, life has been hard. His mother and father do not get along and he argues constantly with his brother and sister. Now that he has turned sixteen, he is eligible to drive, but his parents refuse to take him to get his license. Justin feels depressed and longs for someone to show him some respect.

Antonio has the answer for Justin. "If you want real respect, you need to join my crew." Justin and Antonio have been friends for years, but Justin has always resisted joining Antonio's group because he does not agree with the way that they treat people. On several occasions, the group has attacked innocent people without reason. But Justin is now convinced that if he ever wants to be accepted, this is his chance.

Justin finally decides to join the "Southside Posse." He first has to meet Chico, the group's leader. Chico is nineteen years of age, but he hangs out with students in high school. He quit school at age sixteen, has never held a job, and claims that he is not worried about money. Chico believes that if he needs it, he will take it.

The stage is set and Justin is officially going to become a member of the "Southside Posse," but first he must pass the test. To join the group Justin will have to go through a "beat in" ceremony where several group members will physically assault him until they draw blood. In addition, Chico has ordered that Justin join six members of the group who plan to torch a rival gang member's house. Chico's motto is "If you want respect, you have to pay the price."

Lesson Two With Friends Like These, Who Needs Enemies?

Divided Loyalty

Dalesha is at the top of her game. She has a supportive family, good grades and is working on a basketball scholarship to a major university. Currently, Dalesha is leading the district with a 24 point per game average. College coaches have lined up for a chance to recruit Dalesha, and her future appears bright.

However, Dalesha has a problem with selecting the wrong friends. She is currently being investigated for her role in a large fight between two female groups at a local mall. Although she claims that she is innocent, witnesses have stated that Dalesha was wearing gang attire and participated in the incident, which destroyed food court furniture. Several members of a rival girls' basketball team have evidence that Dalesha has sent messages through the internet and social media threatening additional violence against the "Southside Hood," a known community street gang. The evidence will connect Dalesha to the "Northside Mob," a feared gang in the north side of town.

The local police have determined that Dalesha is a key suspect in the fight and property damage. She will be arrested and charged with gang offenses later this week. The members of Dalesha's basketball team have heard the news and they are concerned whether she will be playing in the upcoming Championship tournament. What will her coach say about the situation? Will this impact her ability to play in college?
